The January 7, 2016 Workplace Safety Conference

The Workplace Safety Conference assembles experts from public and private partners who will address best practices and training methods for effective prevention, response, and intervention of potential crises in the workplace, including mental health issues and violence. The panel will also share case studies (where attendees will actively participate and problem solve) from their experiences to demonstrate how to collaborate with various disciplines within your organization and with outside resources. They will focus on minimizing and avoiding potential risks, and outlining the roles and responsibilities for each discipline of the Threat Management Team at your organization. A “Best-In-Class” checklist will be provided and discussed, for attendees to take back to their company / college / organization and evaluate their own workplace safety programs.

Colleges and universities take note: Title IX issues will be considered, including sample complaints and responses.

900 CHELMSFORD STREET, LOWELL, MA 01851

At the Intersection of Route 3 and I-495
